Senior Medical Writer / Medical Writer

The newest member of our award-winning medical communications team will have hands-on involvement in developing a range of healthcare projects including pre/post congress materials, manuscripts, detailing aids, slide kits and patient education materials. Most importantly, you must be a firm believer of teamwork and open communications. A certain amount of project management and working with in-house designers, clients, business staff and production staff will be expected.

Our Selection Criteria:

- A degree in any discipline of Medical or Life Sciences - postgraduate level is preferred
- Excellent command of written and spoken English
- Being conversant in spoken mandarin will be an additional asset
- Working experience in a medical communications agency or pharmaceutical company will be an added advantage
- Demonstrated interest in medical communications
- Pleasant disposition that fosters productive collaborations with internal staff
- Confidence to liaise with leading medical specialists and clients
- Flexibility to cover symposiums and meetings within and outside of Singapore

General Scope of Duty:

- Conducting background research, developing a full-spectrum of print and electronic medical content, liaising with clients, designers and production teams
- Attending scientific symposia and client meetings
- Develop scientific manuscripts, abstracts and symposium materials
- Fostering skill development of editorial peers, identifying training opportunities for self and for team
- For the senior position, you will be expected to be able to conceptualize marketing solutions for pharmaceutical products and contributing scientific support to business managers as necessary
- In addition, the senior medical writer will be expected to take the lead in working with speakers at on-site events, mentor junior staff and be prepared to handle more on project management
