Gearing you up for Singapore's Healthcare Industry

Boasting one of Asia's best healthcare systems, Singapore's rapid rise to become a global centre for medical research and education has established its importance as a premier medical hub set to grow in the coming years.

The country is now positioning itself as a popular destination for medical tourism and aims to attract 1 million medical tourists annually by 2012 – an ambition which will generate at least 13,000 new jobs to support the growth of this burgeoning economic pillar.

The Master of Science in Healthcare Management, awarded by the University of Wales (U.K.), in collaboration with the Management Development Institute of Singapore, has been created to equip its graduates with the diverse skill-sets required to sustain a lifelong career in the modern healthcare industry. Competent to respond to situations faced in public and private hospitals, physician practices and managed care organizations; successfully completing the programme will prepare you with the critical knowledge and abilities necessary to advance into administrative or leadership positions in the healthcare sector.
